Stephan Sturm, CEO of Fresenius, said: "We achieved substantial earnings growth in the third quarter, following our very strong development in the first half. Each business segment continued to grow organically in every region. That makes us even more confident for the full year 2016. We are also full of optimism about our medium-term prospects. The acquisition of the Spanish hospital group Quirónsalud will further broaden our foundation for continued strong growth. This will be reflected in the ambitious targets for the coming years that we will announce with our forecast for 2017."

Lower end of 2016 Group earnings guidance raised

Based on the Group's excellent financial results and strong prospects for the remainder of the year, Fresenius raises the lower end of its 2016 Group earnings guidance range. The upper end of the Group's earnings guidance remains unchanged, due to the offsetting effect of financing costs related to the Quirónsalud acquisition. Net income<sup>1,2</sup> is now expected to grow by 12% to 14% in constant currency. Previously, Fresenius expected net income<sup>1,2</sup> growth of 11% to 14% in constant currency. The company confirms its Group sales guidance. Sales are expected to increase by 6% to 8% in constant currency.

The net debt/EBITDA<sup>3</sup> ratio is expected to be approximately 2.5 at the end of 2016.
